

Why You Should Consider Changing Your Windows and Doors Sooner Than Later

The windows and doors of your home are the areas in which you enjoy natural light and gain entry into your space. Most homes are designed to have the right numbers of windows and doors to provide the homeowner with a comfortable environment. When energy efficient windows are in place, the home can experience comfort no matter the season. Heat stays inside during the winter, and cool air remains in the home during the summer. Both windows and doors need to be sealed properly so that they can help the home remain comfortable and efficient.

CHANGE YOUR HOME'S WINDOWS AND DOORS - FOR OLDER HOMES

In an older home, the frames around the doors and windows can begin to lose their sealant. You can feel around the frames to see if any air is escaping. If you feel a breeze, be it hot or cold air, it's time to consider replacing your doors and windows.

Most people feel that the summertime months are a perfect time to change out older windows and doors – But in reality – windows and doors can be changed year-round!

CHANGE YOUR HOME'S WINDOWS AND DOORS - WINDOW AND DOOR TECHNOLOGY

Besides the loss of sealant, technology for how windows and doors are created have come leaps and bounds in the past 20 years. Improvements to every area of windows – how the window operates (open/close), glazing types, triple pane, gas fills, in a wide variety of materials and styles.

Similar to windows, door technology and the way they are built has come a long way. Everything from the moulding, frame, panel construction with the core and skin have been improved. Energy audits have increased in complexity and strictness – and the window and door manufacturing industry has responded.
